DETAILED ACTION

1. A response was received on 21 March 2006. No claims have been amended, added, or canceled. Claims 1-5 are currently pending in the present application.

Response to Arguments

2. Applicant's arguments filed 21 March 2006 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Regarding the rejection of Claims 1-5 under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as anticipated by Slivka et al, US Patent 6049671, Applicant argues that Slivka does not disclose or suggest all of the claimed limitations. Specifically, Applicant first argues that Slivka "discloses a method of providing mainly updates and patches" (page 3, lines 1-2 of the present response). The Examiner notes that this does not distinguish Slivka from the present invention, as Applicant's specification also discloses that the method is used for downloading upgrades to components or operating systems (see, for example, page 4, lines 7-9, of the present specification; see also page 1, lines 14-21).

Applicant further argues that the cabinet files of Slivka, corresponding to the claimed configuration file, correspond to a program or group of programs, whereas "the claimed configuration file corresponds to a network element" (page 3, lines 12-15 of the present response). The Examiner first notes that the phrase "network element" appears neither in the claims nor the specification; however, it is assumed that this is intended to refer to the claimed "network appliance". Further, the Examiner notes that although the cabinet files do correspond to particular software programs, they also correspond to a user, noting that cabinet files are created specifically in response to a user request for software (see Slivka, column 13, lines 37-60).

Applicant further alleges that "Slivka is not concerned whether or not the network element itself is authorized to operate a program" (see page 3, lines 18-20, of the present response). However, the Examiner notes that Applicant also states that Slivka discloses that programs or updates may be digitally signed and that the digital signature is checked to determine if access to the downloaded program is authorized (see page 3, lines 8-11, of the present response, citing Slivka, column 16, line 55-column 18, line 15). The Examiner additionally notes that listing software that is available to the user or appliance at least implies that the user or appliance is therefore authorized to download the software (otherwise it would not be "available"). Applicant appears to concede this point by stating that "listing available software for download does implicate an authorization of the network element" (page 4, lines 1-2, of the present response, noting again that it is assumed that "network element" is intended to refer to the claimed network appliance).

Applicant additionally argues that the installation table described, for example, at column 15, lines 50-55, of Slivka, does not perform the function of the claimed load table. However, the previous Office actions have all explicitly mapped the claimed load table, defining components authorized for the network appliance, to the summary of available software at column 8, lines 34-37, of Slivka (see, for example, page 4 of the previous Office action). Further, as noted in the previous Office action, based on this summary of available software, the user authorizes which software is to be downloaded (see Slivka, column 5, lines 55-65; column 6, lines 39-49; and column 8, lines 6-32; further, especially note column 8, lines 43-56, where the user chooses software to be downloaded, i.e. the user authorizes or gives permission for downloading software). The Examiner again notes Applicant's statements that the digital signature on the programs is checked to determine if access to the program is authorized (page 3, lines 8-11, of the present response, citing Slivka, column 16, line 55-column 18, line 15, as noted above) and that "listing available software for download does implicate an authorization" (page 4, lines 1-2, of the present response, as noted above).

Therefore, for the reasons detailed above, the Examiner maintains the rejection as set forth below.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

4. Claims 1-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Slivka et al, US Patent 6049671.

In reference to Claim 1, Slivka discloses a method for securely distributing a component including signing a configuration file (the cabinet in the distribution file of column 16, line 55-column 17, line 1) including a load table (the summary of available software of column 8, lines 34-37), executing a secure kernel for checking the authenticity of the configuration file (column 17, lines 58-63) and for establishing communication with a network host (column 6, lines 12-18), verifying the authenticity of the configuration file (column 17, lines 58-63), reading the load table, and loading authorized components defined in the load table onto a network device (column 8, line 65-column 9, line 2).

In reference to Claim 2, Slivka further discloses that the loaded available software can be an operating system (the database of available software of column 7, lines 49-57, can include operating system components).

In reference to Claim 3, Slivka further discloses loading a software application (column 7, lines 49-64; column 8, line 65-column 9, line 2).

In reference to Claim 4, Slivka further discloses that the loaded available software can be services (the database of available software of column 7, lines 49-57 can include patches, fixes, and wizards).

In reference to Claim 5, Slivka further discloses generating an updated configuration file (column 8, lines 27-33), signing the updated configuration file (column 16, lines 65-67), transmitting the signed configuration file (column 8, lines 34-37), verifying the authenticity of the updated configuration file (column 17, lines 58-63), and reading the updated configuration file (column 8, lines 34-46).

Conclusion

- 5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
 - a. The Examiner again notes that Misra et al, US Patent 6189146, discloses a system for installing software in which a license pack for the software is digitally signed and distributed (as cited in the previous Office action).
- 6. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
